President

“ Education is essential for a nation’s future. The road forward will be a bright one if its human resources are developed to fully understand themselves, the world at large, as well as the sciences and the arts. This would enable them to lead a happy and productive life. Such wisdom, imagination, and lifelong learning would enable them to succeed in the highly competitive knowledge-based society. ”

Dean

“ IDIS’s mission is the preparation of world class professionals for positions of leadership and influence in foreign affairs and international business.

IDIS’s innovative multi-disciplinary approach will equip its students with the necessary knowledge and the ability to understand, analyze and solve complex international issues in an increasingly globalized world.

The knowledge acquired, the friendships forged, and the networks made in a warm international environment at IDIS, will help IDIS students realize their dreams and make a more peaceful and prosperous world through better understanding and co-operation among nations. ”

Rangsit University

Rangsit University was founded in 1986. It is a full-fledged university with 61 programs at the Bachelor's degree level, 16 programs at the master's degree level, and 3 programs at the doctorate's degree level. Many of these programs are taught in English. The number of students currently enrolled at the university totals 16,000 approx.

History

The main campus is situated at Rangsit, Pathumthani, 3 kilometres from Donmuang Airport and has a land area of 161 Rai, or approximately 65 acres. The University also boasts two downtown campuses located in the heart of Bangkok's business district: Sathorn Thani Center and Viphavadee Center.

To meet the challenges of globalization and the increasing demand for world-class professionals in international affairs in Thailand and the Asian region, Dr Arhit Ourairat, President of the University, decided at the beginning of 2006 to establish the Institute of Diplomacy and International Studies (IDIS). The University Council formally approved its establishment on 22 March 2006 and thus IDIS, with its multi-disciplinary approach, became the first institute of its kind in Southeast Asia. Dr Somkiati Ariyapruchya, a veteran diplomat and former Thai ambassador to the United Nations in Vienna, the European Union, Poland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Singapore, Austria, Slovakia and Slovenia, has been appointed founding Dean of the Institute. Dr. Somkiati Ariyapruchya holds a B.A. from the University of Lancaster, England, and M.A., M.A.L.D. and Ph.D. degrees from the renowned Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University.

The establishment of IDIS is an important step in the implementation of Rangsit University's Road Map to Excellence strategy.

Philosophy

The world today is characterized by rapid change and growing interdependence among nations in all areas of human endeavors. The political stability and economic prosperity of nations have become more complex and increasingly dependent upon events beyond national borders. Hence, nations need professionals in foreign affairs who can serve in governments, international organizations, non-governmental organizations, and international business. In South-east Asia, there is no specialized institution which caters to this specific need. The Institute of Diplomacy and International Studies (IDIS) is designed to fill this need.

The Institute will provide professional education in international studies covering the entire spectrum of international relations from international security, international law, international politics, diplomatic history, international economics and business to culture with a focus on the Asian region. Wherever possible, there will be case studies drawn from the experiences of Asia. Since political, economic, cultural and legal issues at the international level are becoming increasingly intertwined, a multi-disciplinary approach will be employed in the teaching and learning of these subjects.

The Institute will also emphasize the importance of connecting theory with practice. Hence, there will be intensive training on practical skills (e.g. negotiation techniques, diplomatic practices, media skills, rhetoric and languages).

Objectives

IDIS aspires to the following:

- Produce professionals for positions of leadership and influence in foreign affairs and international business.
- Promote international cooperation, in particular among Asian countries.
- Foster networking among its alumni, professionals and scholars in international affairs.
- Pursue deep understanding of international issues and concerns through advanced learning and scholarly research.
- Promote foreign language learning.
- Provide both academic and practical skills (e.g. negotiation techniques, diplomatic practices, rhetoric, media skills) for established diplomats and officials at the early to mid-career level in particular those from the Greater Mekong Subregion.
- Provide academic and practical skills to business executives (e.g. negotiation techniques, international practices and norms in communicating with foreign business, rhetoric, media skills) to help bring Thai businesses into international markets.
- Promote Thailand as a hub of diplomatic and international studies in the Southeast Asian region.

Students are required to pass either the examinations of 8 core courses as well as successfully writing and defending a master's thesis (Plan A). Students may otherwise elect to pass the examinations of 8 core courses, 3 elective courses and one independent study course (Plan B).

Students may choose either of the following two plans to meet the degree requirements:

1. Plan A

- 8 Core Courses (4 credits per course; total of 32 credits)
- Thesis: (16 credits)
- Oral Examination
- Publication of thesis in an academic journal

2. Plan B (No Thesis)

- 8 Core Courses (4 credits per course; total of 32 credits)
- 3 Elective Courses (4 credits per course; total of 12 credits)
- Independent Studies (4 credits per course; total of 4 credits)

- IDS 699 Thesis

Core Courses

IDS 601 International Security Studies

The course will survey the sources and resolution of conflict. It will concentrate on contemporary security issues: cultural and religious conflicts; the use of force; terrorism; the Taiwan straits; proliferation of weapons of mass destruction; epidemic outbreaks. It will also trace international and regional efforts to build up multilateral security arrangements aimed at safeguarding peace. The course will also examine the roles of the Security Council, peacekeeping operations, the International Atomic Energy Agency, the ASEAN Regional Forum, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), and the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT).

IDS 610 International Politics

The course will address in depth the main theoretical approaches to international relations and international politics. It will examine the historical evolution of international relations, the behavior and foreign policy of states, and the role of international norms and international institutions. It will investigate current global and regional issues related to international security, international political economy, and other transnational issues.

IDS 620 Public International Law

The course will provide a basic knowledge of international law and key concepts, including sources of international law; subjects of international law. Certain areas of international law will be elaborated upon such as the use of force and terrorism, law of the sea, space law, treaty law, international environmental law, international trade law, and the settlement of international disputes.

IDS 630 International Organizations and Multilateral Diplomacy

This course will equip students with knowledge and a deep understanding of the workings of multilateral diplomacy in key international organizations, such as the United Nations (UN), the World Trade Organization (WTO), the World Bank, and the International Monetary Fund (IMF). It will examine these organizations' origin, evolution and current roles and how they influence world politics and economics. It will also study modern geo-political and geo-economic shifts that shape the incentives and actions of key world players, in particular during the cold war and up until the present. Case studies will be used to demonstrate how decisions are made and negotiations conducted in real-life diplomacy at the multilateral level.

IDS 640 International Economics, Trade and Development

This course is divided into two sections: international trade and international macroeconomics. The international trade section covers issues such as the concept of comparative advantage, commercial policy (i.e. tariffs, export subsidies, and import quotas), trade and economic development and Free Trade Areas. International macroeconomics section covers issues such as the concept of national income accounting and balance of payments, macroeconomic policy management under fixed and flexible exchange rate regimes and case studies on recent economic crises and reforms in developing countries.

IDS 641 International Business, Finance and Investment

This survey course introduces the principles of international business, finance and investment and how they are interrelated. It is designed to provide students with an understanding of predominant economic and business concepts and the frameworks that underline international business, finance and investment, their application as well as their results and consequences. Some key issues such as foreign exchange, exchange rate determination, multinational financing and investment decision, currency risk management, and capital market and portfolio investment will be explored. To some extent, issues such as international trade regimes, the role of multinational corporations and the relationship between foreign investment and national development will also be discussed. Students attending this course will be able to develop skills in identifying and analyzing critical issues involving international business, finance and investment and explore strategy options that are available to governments and businesses. Theories, concepts and issues will be covered systematically throughout the course. Case studies will be used to relate such theories and concepts to actual business problems.

IDS 650 Human Rights and Transnational Social Issues

The course will explore the key concepts in human rights law and procedures, for example, universality, rights versus responsibility, rights versus development, economic and social rights. It will examine the roles of the United Nations and other key international, regional and national institutions as well as the non-governmental organizations created to protect human rights. The course will also address transnational social issues such as refugees, human trafficking, international crime, foreign labor as well as international, regional and national efforts to cope with these issues.

IDS 660 The Mechanics of Diplomacy and International Negotiation

The purpose is to train students on the mechanics of diplomacy and international negotiation. The course will cover the following areas:

- Processes of International Negotiation and Negotiation Techniques.
- Protocol, Etiquette, Diplomatic Correspondence
- Public diplomacy and media skills
- Speech-writing /speech delivery

Elective Courses

IDS 602 Foreign Policy Analysis

This course will explore various theories and approaches as tools in analyzing foreign policy, in particular its formation, implementation and impacts, and in formulating recommendations. These theories and approaches will include realism, neo-realism, post-modernism, decision-making, game theory, systems analysis, and integration theory. Case studies will be used extensively to show how various theories and approaches can be used in analyzing real-life foreign policies in various regions of the world so that students will gain the analytical skills for practical use in their professional life.

The course will also try to impart practical skills to students in analyzing the impacts of the implementation of selected foreign policies, for example, the impacts of the establishment of free trade areas on the government and the private sector of Thailand. In addition, the course will study possible policy recommendations to alleviate such adverse impacts.

IDS 670 Regional Co-operation and Integration; Theory and Practice

The course will explore the theories and concepts of regional cooperation and integration. It will discuss their various forms. Their benefits and costs in the political, economic and social areas would be examined. The course will use ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) and the EU (European Union) as in-depth case studies whereby the similarities and differences between regional cooperation and integration will be discussed.

The course will also trace Thailand's experiments with regional cooperation as tool of its time-honored foreign policy from ASEAN to APEC (Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation), BIMSTEC (Bay of Bengal Initiative for Multi-Sectoral Technical and Economic Cooperation), ACD (Asia Cooperation Dialogue), ACMECS (Ayeyawady-Chao Phraya-Mekong Economic Cooperation Strategy), ASEAN + 3 (China, Japan and South Korea).

IDS 642 Contemporary Political Economy of Southeast Asia

This course is a gateway to understanding the intricate interaction between political and economic policies that drove a selected group of Southeast Asian countries (Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, and Singapore) to be the Asian Tigers. How did the four Asian countries manage to rise to the top of developing countries with impressive growth rates in the 1980s and the early 1990s? What was the political underpinning that helped fuel the growth? The course will offer an analytical overview of political development in the four Southeast Asian nations since the post-colonial era (for Malaysia, Indonesia, and Singapore) and since the Second World War (for Thailand). However, prosperity came with risks as evidenced by the 1997 crisis which brought about not only economic collapses but also deep political changes. How have the political reforms begun almost ten years ago changed the political and economic landscape of Southeast Asian nations? In the end, what should Thailand's foreign and domestic policies be in order to address the changes in its neighboring countries?

IDS 690 Seminar on NGOs; Theory and Practice

Non-governmental Organizations' growing role and influence in foreign affairs are undeniable. The course will introduce students to key international NGOs, Thai NGOs and their work. It will discuss their philosophy, missions, management, fund-raising, budget, advocacy, and NGOs' strategy to influence official policies. NGOs' executives will be invited to speak to the class to share their real-life experiences.

IDS 643 International Political Economy

This course will introduce students to the major issues of international political economy, namely, the proper balance between the state and the market and how their interactions affect the flows of capital, goods and labor and other globalization phenomena. The main theories and perspectives on the political economy, for example, Liberalism, Marxism, and Nationalism will be discussed. The course will then examine the building blocks of the global economy, namely, national economies, global trading system, global financial system and regional economic integration. Finally, the effects, benefits and the alleged resulting problems of globalization such as terrorism, poverty, un-even development, and the effects on environment will be explored.

IDS 691 Seminar on Trade and Investment in Cambodia, Lao PDR, Myanmar and Vietnam

Cambodia, Lao PDR, Myanmar and Vietnam have recently become members of ASEAN and recognized as new and promising markets for trade and investment. This course will explore their trade and investment opportunities. It will survey the prevailing commercial regulations, investment rules and incentives in these countries as well as their political and economic systems. Top executives who have worked and invested in these countries will be invited to share their experiences with the class. This course would be useful for those who wish to pursue careers relating to these countries.

IDS 644 General Taxation

The objectives of the course are to provide students with knowledge and understanding of the main concepts and practical application of taxation system. It is useful for students wishing to practice in the areas of economics, accounting, law, and financial management.

This course provides an economic analysis of and insights into a wide range of taxes. The concepts and methods needed for this analysis, which have general application, will also be presented. The emphasis is on explaining and clarifying the basic principles and demonstrating their wide-ranging applicability.

Topics to be explored include principles of taxation, tax incidence, taxation of goods and services (sales tax, excise tax, value-added tax, custom tariff, etc.), taxation of income, property tax, environmental taxation and some other tax issues related to local governmental finance.

The concepts in taxation offer an excellent balance between tax concepts and the tax code and regulations, preparing users for a future in the business environment. In addition, the course will highlight many institutional issues that are potentially of special interest to students preparing for professional careers.

IDS 681 Thai Studies

This course would be appealing to students who wish to know and understand Thailand in-depth. It will examine Thailand in the political, economic, social and cultural aspects by using multi-disciplinary approach.

Thesis (Plan A) / Independent Studies (Plan B)

IDS 698 Independent Studies

Directed reading and research for credit under the supervision of an advisor. It provides an opportunity for students to study certain issues within the discipline of diplomacy and international studies. The topic for study and research must be approved by the relevant advisor prior to commencement of the study.

IDS 699 (Thesis)

Students who choose plan A must complete a thesis on diplomacy and international studies or related fields as partial requirement of this program. The research topic must be approved by the research topic defense examination committee and the advisor prior to their actual research work.

Academic Year Calendar

The program will last two academic years. The academic year begins in September and will continue until August. It is divided into three semesters.

First Semester	September – December
Second Semester	December – March
Third Semester	May - August.

Admission Requirements

Candidates for admission to the Program must possess at least the following qualifications:

- A bachelor's degree.
- Proficient command of the English language.

Admission Procedure

Applications are accepted throughout the year and reviewed on a rolling basis. Each year, there will be two intakes of students, the first in September (Plan A & Plan B) and the second in May (only Plan B will be offered). Prospective students are advised to submit their applications by 15 July for the September intake and by 30 April for the May intake. Application forms can be obtained from either the Admissions Office, Rangsit University, or from the Institute's website at www.rsu.ac.th/idis. The following documents should be sent to the Admissions Office.

- The application form and required documents.
- A one-A4 page essay on any topic of your choice which will best inform the Admissions Committee about yourself.

Application fee of Baht500 or US$15 can be paid either by check/money order payable to Rangsit University or by transmitting the amount to Bangkok Bank, Rangsit University Sub Branch, Branch Code: 020, Account Name: Rangsit University, Account Number: 020-0-00009-9, Swift Code Bank: BKKBTHBK.

Students will be informed of admissions decisions not later than a month after the receipt of applications.

All enquiries and applications should be addressed to the Admissions Office.

Language Requirements

As English is the medium of instruction, students are required to have a proficient command of the English language. Applicants whose mother-tongue is not English, should have a TOEFL score of at least 500 or its equivalent. If they do not possess the requisite test score, they may take Rangsit University's English Placement Test. Students who do not pass the English Placement Test will be required to take a remedial English language course.

All students are encouraged to take foreign language classes during the Program as languages are valuable assets for careers in international affairs. Rangsit University offers French, Chinese and Japanese language courses. These language courses, however, are not mandatory.

Faculty and Visiting Professors

In line with IDIS's philosophy of combining Theory with Practice, Faculty and Visiting Professors are drawn from leading universities, policy makers from government agencies, ambassadors with global experiences and leading business executives.
